Professor persevered through breast cancer

By Sarah Rafique

Boyd was forced to dissent with this way of thinking.

Eventually, her surgeon reassured her that it was not cancerous or detrimental to her health.

For Dr. Jean, professors are the "dissenters," this is the person who disagrees with the research. They are the "cheerleaders," and the "influential leaders." The "dissenters" are present.

The area that included the breast cancer was the front stage racists. They are the "dissenter." This is the person who disagrees with the research. They are the "cheerleaders," and the "influential leaders." The "dissenters" are present.

The surgeon also reassured her that it was not cancerous or detrimental to her health.

A week after her surgery, she was able to continue her work.

"I simply had no reason to think that anything was wrong," Boyd said.

"We were trying to get into a protest against U.S. Vice President Dick Cheney's visit. Cheney has arrived in Turkey to meet with top officials and discuss the situation in the region.

"The universal practice for testing, bringing the research to the market, is the "dissenter." This is the person who disagrees with the research. They are the "cheerleaders," and the "influential leaders." The "dissenters" are present.

The surgeon also reassured her that it was not cancerous or detrimental to her health.

A week after her surgery, she was able to continue her work.

"I simply had no reason to think that anything was wrong," Boyd said.

"We were trying to get into a protest against U.S. Vice President Dick Cheney's visit. Cheney has arrived in Turkey to meet with top officials and discuss the situation in the region.

"The universal practice for testing, bringing the research to the market, is the "dissenter." This is the person who disagrees with the research. They are the "cheerleaders," and the "influential leaders." The "dissenters" are present.

The surgeon also reassured her that it was not cancerous or detrimental to her health.

A week after her surgery, she was able to continue her work.

"I simply had no reason to think that anything was wrong," Boyd said.

"We were trying to get into a protest against U.S. Vice President Dick Cheney's visit. Cheney has arrived in Turkey to meet with top officials and discuss the situation in the region.

"The universal practice for testing, bringing the research to the market, is the "dissenter." This is the person who disagrees with the research. They are the "cheerleaders," and the "influential leaders." The "dissenters" are present.

The surgeon also reassured her that it was not cancerous or detrimental to her health.

A week after her surgery, she was able to continue her work.

"I simply had no reason to think that anything was wrong," Boyd said.

"We were trying to get into a protest against U.S. Vice President Dick Cheney's visit. Cheney has arrived in Turkey to meet with top officials and discuss the situation in the region.

"The universal practice for testing, bringing the research to the market, is the "dissenter." This is the person who disagrees with the research. They are the "cheerleaders," and the "influential leaders." The "dissenters" are present.

The surgeon also reassured her that it was not cancerous or detrimental to her health.

A week after her surgery, she was able to continue her work.

"I simply had no reason to think that anything was wrong," Boyd said.

"We were trying to get into a protest against U.S. Vice President Dick Cheney's visit. Cheney has arrived in Turkey to meet with top officials and discuss the situation in the region.

"The universal practice for testing, bringing the research to the market, is the "dissenter." This is the person who disagrees with the research. They are the "cheerleaders," and the "influential leaders." The "dissenters" are present.

The surgeon also reassured her that it was not cancerous or detrimental to her health.

A week after her surgery, she was able to continue her work.

"I simply had no reason to think that anything was wrong," Boyd said.

"We were trying to get into a protest against U.S. Vice President Dick Cheney's visit. Cheney has arrived in Turkey to meet with top officials and discuss the situation in the region.

"The universal practice for testing, bringing the research to the market, is the "dissenter." This is the person who disagrees with the research. They are the "cheerleaders," and the "influential leaders." The "dissenters" are present.

The surgeon also reassured her that it was not cancerous or detrimental to her health.

A week after her surgery, she was able to continue her work.

"I simply had no reason to think that anything was wrong," Boyd said.

"We were trying to get into a protest against U.S. Vice President Dick Cheney's visit. Cheney has arrived in Turkey to meet with top officials and discuss the situation in the region.

"The universal practice for testing, bringing the research to the market, is the "dissenter." This is the person who disagrees with the research. They are the "cheerleaders," and the "influential leaders." The "dissenters" are present.

The surgeon also reassured her that it was not cancerous or detrimental to her health.

A week after her surgery, she was able to continue her work.

"I simply had no reason to think that anything was wrong," Boyd said.
Marriages, families destroyed by flawed concepts

In a society increasingly driven both by convenience and pragmatism, perhaps we should not be surprised that the institution of marriage — with all its attendant responsibilities — is facing the same challenges as modern society. The pressures of the independent lifestyle, career, and child-rearing have led many to question the viability of marriage as a long-term commitment.

Consequently, many couples today have a relatively short-term view when it comes to marriage. They may enter into a marriage relationship without fully considering the implications of their actions and the responsibilities that come with such a commitment. This trend of non-Commitment to marriage is also evident in the increasing numbers of pre-marital agreements and the growing acceptance of divorce as a viable option.

Because society has begun to place emphasis on pursuit of one’s own happiness, marriage, as a measure of success, is often treated as a casual, disposable relationship. Many couples view marriage as a means to an end, focusing on the benefits such as tax breaks or social acceptance, rather than on the responsibilities and obligations it entails.

In essence, the current societal dictum is that such intimate relationships are a liability and should be treated as such. The commodification of love and marriage has even provided easy ways to cut the strings that come with marriage, allowing couples to disengage from their commitments.

Prenuptial agreements and loosening of marriage vows have recently become more popular, reflecting the growing acceptance of divorce as a viable option. As such, marriages fail faster than ever before, with many ending in divorce. Even when people enter into marriage with plans to have it last a lifetime, unforeseen circumstances can lead to its dissolution.

However, the most prevalent stigma for this current crop of families is the perception that marriage is a vestigial institution in the home and the workplace. Family commitments are seen as a barrier to success, and the allure of personal achievement and individual freedom becomes too strong to resist.

The trend of non-Commitment to marriage is causing a cycle because success in marriage often requires that one’s personal values, many times taking one step further from commitment. Since marriage is seen as a marital contract, couples squabble over children in much the same way that men and women squabble over money. It is the same when both partners have different goals, desires, or values and can often disagree on matters that are contrary to their best interests.

Perhaps such arrangements could continue to exist in the absence of commitments that we require to pursue whatever career she or he chooses. Perhaps such arrangements could continue to exist in the absence of commitments that we require to pursue whatever career she or he chooses. Perhaps such arrangements could continue to exist in the absence of commitments that we require to pursue whatever career she or he chooses.

Shamara Sneed

Advertising sales

David Poe

Photographers

Kate Thomas

Victoria Mgbemena

Editorial cartoonist

Asst. city editor

Opinion editor

City editor

In an April article, "Facility concerns, family time," Baylor students expressed their desire for improved facilities and better family life on campus. The article highlighted the need for better facilities and family life on campus, as students feel that these are important aspects of their college experience.

Marriages, families destroyed by flawed concepts

In a society increasingly driven both by convenience and pragmatism, perhaps we should not be surprised that the institution of marriage — with all its attendant responsibilities — is facing the same challenges as modern society. The pressures of the independent lifestyle, career, and child-rearing have led many to question the viability of marriage as a long-term commitment.

Consequently, many couples today have a relatively short-term view when it comes to marriage. They may enter into a marriage relationship without fully considering the implications of their actions and the responsibilities that come with such a commitment. This trend of non-Commitment to marriage is also evident in the increasing numbers of pre-marital agreements and the growing acceptance of divorce as a viable option.

Because society has begun to place emphasis on pursuing one’s own happiness, marriage, as a measure of success, is often treated as a casual, disposable relationship. Many couples view marriage as a means to an end, focusing on the benefits such as tax breaks or social acceptance, rather than on the responsibilities and obligations it entails.

In essence, the current societal dictum is that such intimate relationships are a liability and should be treated as such. The commodification of love and marriage has even provided easy ways to cut the strings that come with marriage, allowing couples to disengage from their commitments.

Prenuptial agreements and loosening of marriage vows have recently become more popular, reflecting the growing acceptance of divorce as a viable option. As such, marriages fail faster than ever before, with many ending in divorce. Even when people enter into marriage with plans to have it last a lifetime, unforeseen circumstances can lead to its dissolution.

However, the most prevalent stigma for this current crop of families is the perception that marriage is a vestigial institution in the home and the workplace. Family commitments are seen as a barrier to success, and the allure of personal achievement and individual freedom becomes too strong to resist.

The trend of non-Commitment to marriage is causing a cycle because success in marriage often requires that one’s personal values, many times taking one step further from commitment. Since marriage is seen as a marital contract, couples squabble over children in much the same way that men and women squabble over money. It is the same when both partners have different goals, desires, or values and can often disagree on matters that are contrary to their best interests. Perhaps such arrangements could continue to exist in the absence of commitments that we require to pursue whatever career she or he chooses. Perhaps such arrangements could continue to exist in the absence of commitments that we require to pursue whatever career she or he chooses. Perhaps such arrangements could continue to exist in the absence of commitments that we require to pursue whatever career she or he chooses.

Shamara Sneed

Advertising sales

David Poe

Photographers

Kate Thomas

Victoria Mgbemena

Editorial cartoonist

Asst. city editor

Opinion editor

City editor

In an April article, "Facility concerns, family time," Baylor students expressed their desire for improved facilities and better family life on campus. The article highlighted the need for better facilities and family life on campus, as students feel that these are important aspects of their college experience.

Marriages, families destroyed by flawed concepts

In a society increasingly driven both by convenience and pragmatism, perhaps we should not be surprised that the institution of marriage — with all its attendant responsibilities — is facing the same challenges as modern society. The pressures of the independent lifestyle, career, and child-rearing have led many to question the viability of marriage as a long-term commitment.

Consequently, many couples today have a relatively short-term view when it comes to marriage. They may enter into a marriage relationship without fully considering the implications of their actions and the responsibilities that come with such a commitment. This trend of non-Commitment to marriage is also evident in the increasing numbers of pre-marital agreements and the growing acceptance of divorce as a viable option.

Because society has begun to place emphasis on pursuing one’s own happiness, marriage, as a measure of success, is often treated as a casual, disposable relationship. Many couples view marriage as a means to an end, focusing on the benefits such as tax breaks or social acceptance, rather than on the responsibilities and obligations it entails.

In essence, the current societal dictum is that such intimate relationships are a liability and should be treated as such. The commodification of love and marriage has even provided easy ways to cut the strings that come with marriage, allowing couples to disengage from their commitments.

Prenuptial agreements and loosening of marriage vows have recently become more popular, reflecting the growing acceptance of divorce as a viable option. As such, marriages fail faster than ever before, with many ending in divorce. Even when people enter into marriage with plans to have it last a lifetime, unforeseen circumstances can lead to its dissolution.

However, the most prevalent stigma for this current crop of families is the perception that marriage is a vestigial institution in the home and the workplace. Family commitments are seen as a barrier to success, and the allure of personal achievement and individual freedom becomes too strong to resist.

The trend of non-Commitment to marriage is causing a cycle because success in marriage often requires that one’s personal values, many times taking one step further from commitment. Since marriage is seen as a marital contract, couples squabble over children in much the same way that men and women squabble over money. It is the same when both partners have different goals, desires, or values and can often disagree on matters that are contrary to their best interests.

Perhaps such arrangements could continue to exist in the absence of commitments that we require to pursue whatever career she or he chooses. Perhaps such arrangements could continue to exist in the absence of commitments that we require to pursue whatever career she or he chooses. Perhaps such arrangements could continue to exist in the absence of commitments that we require to pursue whatever career she or he chooses. Perhaps such arrangements could continue to exist in the absence of commitments that we require to pursue whatever career she or he chooses. Perhaps such arrangements could continue to exist in the absence of commitments that we require to pursue whatever career she or he chooses. Perhaps such arrangements could continue to exist in the absence of commitments that we require to pursue whatever career she or he chooses.
Softball determined to win

by Justin Baar
Sports writer

The Lady Bears (20-14) are facing the rest of the Big 12 to try and push their record to .500 and beyond, which is the reason the Lady Bears recently decided to take on the financial responsibilities they have.

After a hampering 8-0 loss against the Texas A&M University College Station Aggies, head coach Jo Pascua scheduled a 9 p.m. practice the next day to send a message to her team.

"I think it's important that we need to kind of pick ourselves up on the turf dampened from the weather," Pascua said. "I think it's important to send a message to the team that we need to get prepared to play."

The Lady Bears, who have struggled to score this season, will be sending a message to the Lady Bears' name, sophomore Karri Cherrington said. "Right now we're not deserving to wear the Lady Bears' name."

The Lady Bears will be giving it their all to 500 in conference play this season. Cherrington called in and drink in the company of a ceremony. Pre- sold tickets are $20, but standing room tickets can be purchased for $15 on the day of the festival. The ticket will be $15 for the Kiyari Daiko percussion and $10 for the Otherworlders.

Softball determined to win

by Justin Baar
Sports writer

The Lady Bears (20-14) are facing the rest of the Big 12 to try and push their record to .500 and beyond, which is the reason the Lady Bears recently decided to take on the financial responsibilities they have.

After a hampering 8-0 loss against the Texas A&M University College Station Aggies, head coach Jo Pascua scheduled a 9 p.m. practice the next day to send a message to her team.

"I think it's important that we need to kind of pick ourselves up on the turf dampened from the weather," Pascua said. "I think it's important to send a message to the team that we need to get prepared to play."

The Lady Bears, who have struggled to score this season, will be sending a message to the Lady Bears' name, sophomore Karri Cherrington said. "Right now we're not deserving to wear the Lady Bears' name."

The Lady Bears will be giving it their all to 500 in conference play this season. Cherrington called in and drink in the company of a ceremony. Pre- sold tickets are $20, but standing room tickets can be purchased for $15 on the day of the festival. The ticket will be $15 for the Kiyari Daiko percussion and $10 for the Otherworlders.

by By Sommer Ingram
Staff Writer

Student Senate put its support behind outreach ministries and cultural student organizations in its Spring Thursday Night Fund.

Funds were allocated to the Impact Hispanic Outreach, the Hispanic Student Association, the Impact Indian Outreach, the Impact Chinese Outreach, and the Impact African Outreach.

"There is a large population of minority students on campus who need outreach ministries and cultural student organizations," said Thomas Howard, junior psychology major and student senate representative for the Impact Chinese Outreach.

Constitutional issues arise in the Senate debate when discussing the Impact Hispanic Outreach bill requiring money from the student life fund toward a fundraiser.

They are hoping this event to raise funds to continue to provide blood drives and contribute to Relay for Life.

The Office of Student Life, which oversees the Impact Hispanic Outreach, is asking for $10,000 in order to continue the mission of the group.

They are hoping this event to raise funds to continue to provide blood drives and contribute to Relay for Life.

The Office of Student Life, which oversees the Impact Hispanic Outreach, is asking for $10,000 in order to continue the mission of the group.

by By Sommer Ingram
Staff Writer

Student Senate put its support behind outreach ministries and cultural student organizations in its Spring Thursday Night Fund.

Funds were allocated to the Impact Hispanic Outreach, the Hispanic Student Association, the Impact Indian Outreach, the Impact Chinese Outreach, and the Impact African Outreach.

"There is a large population of minority students on campus who need outreach ministries and cultural student organizations," said Thomas Howard, junior psychology major and student senate representative for the Impact Chinese Outreach.

Constitutional issues arise in the Senate debate when discussing the Impact Hispanic Outreach bill requiring money from the student life fund toward a fundraiser.

They are hoping this event to raise funds to continue to provide blood drives and contribute to Relay for Life.

The Office of Student Life, which oversees the Impact Hispanic Outreach, is asking for $10,000 in order to continue the mission of the group.

They are hoping this event to raise funds to continue to provide blood drives and contribute to Relay for Life.

The Office of Student Life, which oversees the Impact Hispanic Outreach, is asking for $10,000 in order to continue the mission of the group.
KOREA from page 1

Korea through breast cancer

Boyd scheduled her chemo treatments in the spring of 2006.

Boyd followed through with treatment after Kimble was diagnosed.

Boyd said her hair still hasn’t grown back to where she will feel like God wanted this to happen.

Korean Premier Lee Myung-bak said he will press for the issue of the North’s nuclear program in his meeting with U.S. President George Bush in Washington on Wednesday.

Lee said he will ask Bush to support South Korea’s efforts to getotte the North’s nuclear program.

Lee said he will ask Bush to support South Korea’s efforts to get the North to start denuclearization.

Lee said he will ask Bush to support South Korea’s efforts to get the North to start denuclearization.

Lee said he will ask Bush to support South Korea’s efforts to get the North to start denuclearization.

Lee said he will ask Bush to support South Korea’s efforts to get the North to start denuclearization.

Lee said he will ask Bush to support South Korea’s efforts to get the North to start denuclearization.

Lee said he will ask Bush to support South Korea’s efforts to get the North to start denuclearization.

Lee said he will ask Bush to support South Korea’s efforts to get the North to start denuclearization.

Lee said he will ask Bush to support South Korea’s efforts to get the North to start denuclearization.

Lee said he will ask Bush to support South Korea’s efforts to get the North to start denuclearization.

Lee said he will ask Bush to support South Korea’s efforts to get the North to start denuclearization.

Lee said he will ask Bush to support South Korea’s efforts to get the North to start denuclearization.

Lee said he will ask Bush to support South Korea’s efforts to get the North to start denuclearization.

Lee said he will ask Bush to support South Korea’s efforts to get the North to start denuclearization.

Lee said he will ask Bush to support South Korea’s efforts to get the North to start denuclearization.

Lee said he will ask Bush to support South Korea’s efforts to get the North to start denuclearization.

Lee said he will ask Bush to support South Korea’s efforts to get the North to start denuclearization.

Lee said he will ask Bush to support South Korea’s efforts to get the North to start denuclearization.

Lee said he will ask Bush to support South Korea’s efforts to get the North to start denuclearization.

Lee said he will ask Bush to support South Korea’s efforts to get the North to start denuclearization.

Lee said he will ask Bush to support South Korea’s efforts to get the North to start denuclearization.

Lee said he will ask Bush to support South Korea’s efforts to get the North to start denuclearization.

Lee said he will ask Bush to support South Korea’s efforts to get the North to start denuclearization.

Lee said he will ask Bush to support South Korea’s efforts to get the North to start denuclearization.

Lee said he will ask Bush to support South Korea’s efforts to get the North to start denuclearization.

Lee said he will ask Bush to support South Korea’s efforts to get the North to start denuclearization.

Lee said he will ask Bush to support South Korea’s efforts to get the North to start denuclearization.

Lee said he will ask Bush to support South Korea’s efforts to get the North to start denuclearization.

Lee said he will ask Bush to support South Korea’s efforts to get the North to start denuclearization.

Lee said he will ask Bush to support South Korea’s efforts to get the North to start denuclearization.

Lee said he will ask Bush to support South Korea’s efforts to get the North to start denuclearization.

Lee said he will ask Bush to support South Korea’s efforts to get the North to start denuclearization.

Lee said he will ask Bush to support South Korea’s efforts to get the North to start denuclearization.

Lee said he will ask Bush to support South Korea’s efforts to get the North to start denuclearization.

Lee said he will ask Bush to support South Korea’s efforts to get the North to start denuclearization.

Lee said he will ask Bush to support South Korea’s efforts to get the North to start denuclearization.

Lee said he will ask Bush to support South Korea’s efforts to get the North to start denuclearization.

Lee said he will ask Bush to support South Korea’s efforts to get the North to start denuclearization.

Lee said he will ask Bush to support South Korea’s efforts to get the North to start denuclearization.

Lee said he will ask Bush to support South Korea’s efforts to get the North to start denuclearization.

Lee said he will ask Bush to support South Korea’s efforts to get the North to start denuclearization.

Lee said he will ask Bush to support South Korea’s efforts to get the North to start denuclearization.

Lee said he will ask Bush to support South Korea’s efforts to get the North to start denuclearization.

Lee said he will ask Bush to support South Korea’s efforts to get the North to start denuclearization.

Lee said he will ask Bush to support South Korea’s efforts to get the North to start denuclearization.

Lee said he will ask Bush to support South Korea’s efforts to get the North to start denuclearization.

Lee said he will ask Bush to support South Korea’s efforts to get the North to start denuclearization.

Lee said he will ask Bush to support South Korea’s efforts to get the North to start denuclearization.

Lee said he will ask Bush to support South Korea’s efforts to get the North to start denuclera